May I again welcome to the Rice campus all of you associated with the visiting team and all who are here essentially to enjoy a good game of football. Much of this campus is so torn up you can hardly see it, but we here are confident that such confusion is the evidence of better things to come.

In recent years, intercollegiate athletics have been subject to much criticism, some of it justified, on the part of sports writers and the general public. May we hope that each of you, interested in good sport, will join with us to help our athletic program contribute to the virtues we really expect of men we admire. In the words of a distinguished leader, "There are among others, loyalties that exclude taking refuge in subterfuges; the spirit of self-renunciation where one is to fade into the background in order that the interests of the team may thereby be furthered; fidelity to obligations undertaken, modesty in victory, serenity in defeat."

The Rice Institute has an able group of coaches and administrative officials who carry out a wide variety of duties required in the presentation of a well-rounded major collegiate athletic program.

The head of the staff in the role of athletic director and football coach is Jess Neely, who this year also serves as president of the American Football Coaches Association. He is in his 17th season this fall as head coach of the Rice Owls, coming to Houston in 1940 after a successful tenure as head coach and athletic director at Clemson College.

Line coach Joe Davis and back coach Cecil Grigg have been with Neely as aides at Rice since 1940 with other members joining the staff at intervals since down to the newest member, "Bo" Hagan, who is in his first grid season as an Owl coach.

Dr. Bray, pictured above, has been the Rice representative to the Southwest Conference since 1940. In addition to the coaches of other sports and administrative personnel pictured here, two other valuable full time members of the department in the athletic business office are Miss Jane Albertston and Mrs. Mary Klapp. Members of the coaching staff who serve on a seasonal basis for their sports are tennis coach George Richey, swimming coach Frank Bearden, and fencing coach Harold Van Buskirk of the 1956 SWC champions in that field. J. B. Sorsby in the athletic equipment room has been with Rice over 20 years.

TONIGHT'S GAME

By BILL WHITMORE

Rice Sports News Director

There is a popular theory you can't keep a good man down for long, and the two determined grid teams that take the field at Rice Stadium will be out to prove that axiom this evening.

Rice Institute and Alabama through the years have ranked among the elite in major college football with a great consistency of winning teams. Last fall, both felt the pull of the inevitable pendulum that swung them to the losing side of the ledger. Now, both face the '56 campaign with potentially stronger teams eager to surprise rivals who might be lulled into complacency by their disappointments of '55.

Tonight's clash will determine which of the two is more ready for the big comeback effort at this early stage, and as a result there should be considerable leather popping down on the turf.

Host school Rice fields the overall youngest and lightest team to represent the Blue and Gray in some years. It is a team, however, with signs of an improved passing attack, much more speed than last fall, and an abundance of enthusiasm.

Jess Neely, the highly respected Owl head grid coach, begins his 17th year at the helm for Rice while serving concurrently in a position of great prestige as president of the American Football Coaches Association. He and his able staff have been working hard to get the Owls prepped for this initial test against the Southeastern Conference invaders.

They will field a starting eleven slated to have five sophomores and a junior who didn't letter last fall to go with five lettermen. Although short on experience, this group and their replacements pack a striking force that can "go for six" from anywhere on the field.

The Blue-Gray intrasquad clashed here last Saturday night before a good turnout of 11,000 revealed the Owls have excellent quarterbacking in the talented hands and feet of Frank Ryan and King Hill. Both smartly engineered the Rice straight T attack as they handle the passing and punting duties and are stellar running threats while alternating at the man-under post.

The top of the T is an all-sophomore cast among the starters with three fleet lads in Dan Shuford at left half, G. F. Alsbrook at right half, and Raymond Chilton at fullback. All did well with Emmett Brunson's Rice frosh track team last spring, and can go for the long yardage if the line can give them some daylight.

The line is comparatively small, but with such veterans as Larry Whitmire at tackle, Matt Gorges and Charley Thompson at the guards, and Jerry Harris at center, there are some blockers who can perform that chore. The end positions are well manned, with left end Buddy Dial making his varsity debut bearing special notice as a potentially great pass receiver.

Alabama, directed by a veteran of the coaching ranks in J. B. Whitworth who is in his second season at his alma mater, has many new faces in the line-up. The Crimson Tide is expected to benefit from the return of two standout players from the service in center John Snoderly (who played in the Tide's 28-6 loss to Rice in the 1954 Cotton Bowl game) and full-back Ed Pharo. They also have several highly rated newcomers up from one of Alabama's best freshman teams in recent years.

Clay Walls directs the Tide attack of the multiple T, and can call on some dangerous runners, particularly 210-pound left half Jim Loftin. The line is big and mobile.

This is the third meeting of Rice and Alabama, with the Owls twice victorious—in the aforementioned Cotton Bowl game and by 20-0 in the season opener here last year.

The pageantry of Houston's first big football weekend began last night with a pep rally at Rice Gym, and the "color" aspect continues this evening with a splendid halftime show featuring the famed Wharton Junior College Starlettes precision drill team, and music from the Rice Band.

RICE BAND

"We've got a hard working, eager group of youngsters with top leadership among our veterans. We'll have to depend on some inexperienced boys to come through at a few key positions, but they have the ability to do it. This group works hard in practice, and the boys want to make a good showing. I thing my charges will give a good account of themselves when they take the field at Rice Stadium for the Alabama game, and for the rest of Coach Jess Neely talking about his Rice football team? Nope. That was the message from Holmes McNeely, the able and hard working director of the Rice Band, as he sent his charges through a rugged workout as the 1956 season began.

The chore of organizing a college band for its most necessary role to provide the sound and color that adds so much to the entertainment of an afternoon or evening of football is a big one. The duties and problems of a band director, in fact, are quite similar to those of the football coach. He must assemble a group of men of above average ability in a specific phase of their field, organize them into a unit, equip them, and prepare them to perform for big

The Rice Band especially is appreciative of the consistent good turnouts of the fans at the annual Rice intrasquad Blue-Gray grid games that provide a good part of the funds that pays for the band's uniforms and instruments.

This year, as in the past, the 70-piece Rice Band will provide the music and halftime performances at the Rice football games, will play at the Owl basketball home games, and entertain at various other events.

Members of the band at Rice all participate on a volunteer basis, and devote many of their hours away from the classroom and study sessions to provide the entertainment and inspiration that comes from their music at these events.

Officials of the band in addition to director McNeely include faculty advisors Samuel G. McCann, director of admissions at Rice, and associate dean for students Guy T. McBride, Jr. Student officers for this school year are James Alexander, president; Port Baughman, vice-president and publicity; Larry Belcher, business manager; Larry Burton, drum major; Tom Souther, assistant drum major; Harris Wood, student conductor; Eldgridge Custer, librarian; and Fred Brisman, publicity.

And a final word for the Rice Band—If any of you fans who read this know of some current high school students who have good classroom records worthy of the qualifications to enter Rice Institute and who also can play a mean trumpet or some other instrument, tip off Mr. McNeely where he can contact them. Just as Coach Neely and staff are always on the lookout for those good halfbacks or guards to carry on the fine tradition of Rice participation in major college football, the band director is eager to locate good students who can help out in the trombone section or the like.

FACTS ABOUT RICE INSTITUTE

- Rice is a privately supported, co-educational tuition-free university, which offers courses in the basic fields of liberal arts, science, engineering, and architecture and physical education.
- The Institute was founded by William Marsh Rice who provided the original endowment. With its campus of three hundred acres, Rice opened its doors to students in 1912.
- Dr. William V. Houston has been President of Rice since 1946. He came to the Institute from the California Institute of Technology where he was chairman of the Division of Physics, Mathematics and Electrical Engineering. President Emeritus, Dr. Edgar Odell Lovett served Rice as President from its opening in 1912 until the appointment of Dr. Houston.
- The student body comprises approximately 1800 men and women with some 250 of these doing graduate work toward advanced degrees.
- Because no student is charged tuition, in order to keep instructional costs within the limitations of the income from endowment and the generosity of friends it has been necessary since 1924 to restrict the size of the student body. This is done by controlling the size of the incoming freshman class. Admission is based on a number of criteria designed to indicate whether the student will do well after arriving on the campus. The high school record is examined, and importance is placed on the scores attained on the College Entrance Board Examination. In addition, each applicant is considered on the basis of a personal interview.

- Each year within certain fields many more apply than can be admitted. Thus those who wish to attend Rice should make application early in their senior year of high school.
- At its forty-third commencement held last June Rice awarded the following degrees; 17 Doctor of Philosophy, 25 Masters, 267 Bachelor of Arts, 70 Bachelor of Science in Engineering and Architecture, and 22 Bachelor of Science in Physical Education,
- The Fondren Library houses 274,000 volumes of scientific, technical books and volumes in the humanities. About 12,000 volumes are added each year. Rice subscribes to many learned journals.
- Rice continually strives to have a faculty of intellectual vigor. In addition to the regular faculty, this year will see four internationally known scholars on the campus as visiting professors: Dr. E. Harris Harbison, Professor of History at Princeton; Dr. Louis Landré, Professor University of Paris; Sir John Sheppard, formerly provost of King's College, Cambridge; Sir Richard V. Southwell, former Director of the Imperial College of Science and Technology, London. Also, a number of post-doctoral Fellows and research associates from universities in this country and abroad are at Rice each year to engage in the various research programs under way at the Institute.
- Many varied social and extracurricular activities are available on the campus to the student body. These activities range from the religious organizations, to intramural sports, to social events and dances.

Rice Builds for the Future

In order to better serve the nation and to meet the educational challenge ahead, Rice Institute continually strives to provide the physical facilities important to present day university education.

Through the generosity of alumni and friends Rice is making progress toward meeting this need. Within a short time, by the construction of two buildings, Rice will have new facilities for the Departments of Geology and Biology. In addition, there will be a Memorial Chapel and Student Center.

Already work is under way on the residential college building program which includes both altering and adding to existing men's residential halls to convert them into the physical form required for residential colleges and building the college for women students to house girls on the Rice campus for the first time. The residential colleges for both men and women will include facilities for group living and dining within each college of 220 men or women students. Each college will be provided with residential suites for faculty Fellows and will also possess the unique feature of individual houses for Masters and their families.

It is hoped that the buildings now being provided together with the planning which has preceded the present construction will encourage the formation of strong individual college student governments in the tradition of the Rice Institute. Each freshman, during his first year on the campus, will select a college in which he will spend the remainder of his undergraduate career.

Throughout the planning for the residential college system, care has been taken through provisions for group living, student government, and faculty in residence to develop in the undergraduate a sense of community responsibility and an informed curiosity.

Rice Athletes Get Top Medical and Training Care

The treatment and prevention of athletic injuries—with emphasis on the prevention—is an important phase of the football activities at Rice Institute,

Head trainer Eddie Wojecki has no peer at looking after this particular part of the Rice grid program. He has had over two decades experience in the field, served with the 1952 U. S. Olympic team at Helsinki, Finland, and last year was national chairman of the college athletic trainers' association. He and his aides see that the Owls have the best of equipment designed to give each player maximum protection, and they conduct a modern training room to look after the athletes' daily needs in treatment.

An excellent staff of physicians keep close check on the Owls from a thorough physical examination before practice begins until the season is over.

The official team physician for Rice Institute since 1929 is Dr. Hugh Welsh, while Doctors Ed T. Smith and Jack Brannon work with him in keeping close tab on the Owls' physical condition throughout the year.

In addition, there is a group of consulting medical men whose abilities in specialized fields are put to use when needed. These men are Dr. John Stough, Dr. Charles Dickson, Dr. Fred Lummis, Dr. James Greenwood, Jr., Dr. Cecil Crigler, Dr. L. M. Vaughan, Dr. Larry Schumacher, and Dr. Donald Ruthven (dentist), and Dr. W. H. Worrell, (dentist).

The University of Alabama was established in 1820, one year after Alabama was admitted to the Union, and was first opened to students in 1831. Thirty five young men comprised the first student body and the physical plant was not much larger with two dormitories, a chapel, chemistry building, and four faculty homes forming the campus.

Today, one hundred and twenty-five years later, the University has expanded and grown into a well planned seat of learning which has thousands of students studying, living, and playing in hundreds of class rooms, dormitories, and other University buildings. The passing years have seen many great moments and known many outstanding educators and administrators as the University of Alabama has solidified its place as the "Capstone" of the state educational system.

From the ashes of a fire swept campus following the War between the States, the University has developed into the modern institution of today, consisting of thirteen major divisions on the campus and two in Birmingham. Located at Tuscaloosa are: the College of Arts and Sciences,

School of Chemistry, School of Commerce and Business Administration, College of Education, College of Engineering and School of Mines, School of Home Economics, School of Law, Graduate School, Extension Division, and Summer School. A new fourteen in Birmingham.

Alabama's military record is rich in tradition and color. From the 300 cadets who marched out to meet the enemy in 1865 to the present ROTC units and special classes assigned to the University by the armed forces today, the campus has felt the tread of thousands of American men and women. Since World War I more ROTC students have trained at the University than at West Point.

The first women students were admitted to the University in 1893 and today some 2000 coeds form a good percentage of the University enrollment. Dr. John M. Gallalee, long
